IDB approves Carter negotiations; Plan to build new school on schedule

Knoxville, Tenn. — The Knox County Industrial Development Board voted today to allow Knox County to enter into formal negotiations with Partners Development to potentially build a new Carter Elementary School.

“Today’s vote by the IDB helps keep us on track to hopefully build a new Carter Elementary School, and I look forward to talking to the Knox County Commission about this proposal later this month,” Knox County Mayor Tim Burchett said.

The plan to build a new Carter Elementary remains on schedule, and negotiations with Partners Development could start as early as this week.
