

What Will the Future Hold for Recreation in Tennessee?

The Tennessee Department of Environment and Conservation is holding a series of public meetings in April to discuss the Tennessee State Comprehensive Recreation Plan, which identifies opportunities for statewide recreation. The public is invited to attend and provide input about the plan.

Input on recreation issues from a wide spectrum of citizens, agencies and public officials is vital to the process and helps prioritize recreation needs and guide distribution of grant funds, land acquisitions and facility/site developments.

The public is invited to attend a meeting in Farragut at 6:30 PM, April 6, 2009, Farragut Town Hall, 11408 Municipal Center Drive

Please come to share your input. Help shape the future of recreation in Tennessee.
