Mayor Jacobs Talks About the History Center, Work Zones and More

KNOXVILLE, Tenn.— During his Weekly Update, which will post at about 3 p.m. today, Knox County Mayor Glenn Jacobs congratulates Judy Wasik for earning the Bill Worth Dedication; discusses several events he attended; and details the new rare books and manuscript room at the East Tennessee History Center.

In addition, he notes that this week is National Work Zone Safety Week.

"Whether it's fixing or maintaining roads, or mowing the shoulders and medians, our road crews work hard to ensure that all of us can get where we're going," Mayor Jacobs says. "And sometime that work can be dangerous. One of the worst phone calls that I've ever received was when one of our mowers was struck by a car, seriously injuring the mower operator. When you see a work zone or a road crew out working, please slow down and move over if possible. Not just this week, but every week."
