Mayor Jacobs Talks About AMR, 9/11 Day of Service and Other Events

KNOXVILLE, Tenn.— During his Weekly Update, which will post around 1 p.m. today, Knox County Mayor Glenn Jacobs talks about American Medical Response, the 9/11 Day of Service and other events he attended this week.

Mayor Jacobs addresses issues AMR, a private ambulance operation that contracts with the county, experienced this week and measures taken to fix the problems.

"AMR does need to get more ambulances on the road," says Knox County Mayor Glenn Jacobs. "I was happy to see that they have reassigned and relocated ambulances and first responders from neighboring AMR operations to increase the available 911 ambulances."

He also touches on the different ways Knox County honored the victims from the Sept. 11, 2001 terrorist attacks and discusses a number of other events he attended this week, including the Knoxville Chamber's Governor's Breakfast with Gov. Bill Lee and the Special Forces Berlin Reunion.

Be sure to watch until the end of the video to find out where next week's Eat and Greet takes place.
